Autumn Awaits at the National Coal Mining Museum

As the days draw in and we say farewell to summer, our museum comes alive with a new season of discovery, creativity, and celebration.

Whether you're visiting for the first time or returning for another adventure, there's always something new and fascinating to explore.

Autumn is a stunning time to visit. Wander through our 42-acre outdoor spaces, where you will see changing trees, habitats, and flowers as you explore our nature trail.

Our galleries are packed with monumental objects and enjoy brand-new exhibitions including Kellingley Remembered, opening in October, which pays tribute to one of the UK's last working collieries.

We've also got a whole host of family activities and events planned, from creative workshops to our magical Light Up Festival and Parade, when the museum glows with hundreds of handmade lanterns. As we head toward Christmas, we can't wait for the return of a very special guest... Santa will be making the museum his home this December, ready to hear your festive wishes and spread festive cheer.

So, wrap up warm, bring your curiosity, and join us for a season full of wonder at the National Coal Mining Museum.

Jason and the Underground Mining Adventures

Coming

From March 2026

The Museum is proud to announce that it will be working in partnership with acclaimed artist, Jason Wilsher-Mills MBE, after he secured almost £145,000 in funding from Arts Council England to embark on an ambitious year-long national project.

This landmark project will see Jason create a permanent, interactive tapestry inspired by the museum's historic collection of coal mining union banners. Deeply personal to the artist, these banners evoke vivid memories of his childhood visits to the Wakefield Miners' Gala in Thornes Park during the 1970s, making the project event more poignant.

In addition to the tapestry, Jason will develop two monumental 20-foot inflatable sculptures featuring interactive LED lighting, as well as immersive animations and film content in collaboration with Hot Knife Digital Media.

All the work will be exhibited in the Museum's gallery spaces alongside its outstanding mining collections, creating a striking contrast between industrial heritage and contemporary art.
