Autumn Awaits at the National Coal Mining Museum

As the days draw in and we say farewell to summer, our Museum comes alive with a new season of discovery, creativity, and celebration. Whether you're visiting for the first time or returning for another adventure, there's always something new and fascinating to explore.

Autumn is a stunning time to visit. Wander through our 43-acre outdoor spaces, where you will see changing trees, habitats, and flowers as you explore our nature trail. Our galleries are packed with monumental objects and enjoy brand-new exhibitions including Villagers — Sculpting the Community, inspired by Betty Miller's incredible sculptural tableau My Village.

We've also got a whole host of family activities and events planned, from creative family workshops and festive film screenings to our magical Light Up Festival and Parade, when the Museum glows with hundreds of handmade lanterns. As we head toward Christmas, we can't wait for the return of a very special guest... Santa will be making the Museum his home this December, ready to hear your festive wishes and spread festive cheer.
